This model is based on resource deployment on man-months based on scope of work along with any additional cost like development tools etc. This model is flexible and provides opportunity to cope up with the changing requirements, shift milestones, etc. It is generally used in projects with agile/ dynamic requirements where project scope is not yet fully known. In this model, an agency is shortlisted as per the selection criteria defined in TOR. The agency is evaluated (among empaneled agencies) on the basis of past experience in handling similar projects having sufficient resources to be deployed, resource interaction, etc. Under this mode, other than manpower, any material (if required) may be channelized through other mode(s) of procurement(s). This mode allows agency to work at locations specified by the user department or RISL.

b. Fixed Price Project (FPP):

This model may be used in the scenario where the requirements are clear with defined milestones/ deadlines with a fixed budget. It may be an effective choice when requirements, specifications are highly predictable, i.e., where clients are able to share their clear vision of the software application. In this case, Terms of Reference (TOR) document, encompassing the scope of work, milestones, and other relevant details, may be circulated among the empaneled agencies. An agency may then be selected based on the predefined selection criteria outlined in the TOR and their prior experience in executing the projects. The selected agency will be responsible for completion of the project with the agreed terms and conditions as defined in the TOR. Change requests may be taken care either in TOR or asking for revised proposals. This mode allows agency to work on onsite-offsite model with key resources (mutually discussed with RISL/ clients) placed onsite on need basis.

The payments may be released as per agreed terms in TOR. Usually, in this mode of projects, the payment term(s) shall be as mentioned in the Term of Reference (TOR) circulated for individual projects.
